From Godey's Lady's book. Home, Sister, Home. BY R. K. SHAW.

The balmy breeze that fan's my brow, When evening with its shades has come, A language, sister mine, that speaks 'Tis gently saying, Sister, home!
Home, sister, home! I'm coming home!

The little rill that leaping runs
Adown the ledge so lightly now, In language speaketh to the heart; It gently murmurs, Sister, home Home, sister, home! I'm coming home!

The beauteous birds that hover round My woodland path, as oft I stray Within the spicy groves alone,
Are sweetly singing, Sister, home!
Home, sister, home! I'm coming home!

The little, merry, prattling child, With guileless, lightsome heart, and free From selfish toil and worldly care, Is sweetly saying, Sister, home! Home, sister, home! I'm coming home!
